Installation : 1. Copy the zip file to your computer, unzip the download and then double click on the "Teleprompt_LE.exe" file to install the software. 2. The software will be installed in a folder called "Downloads". First impressions: Once installed, Tele-Prompt looks like a full version teleprompter with all of its original features. As mentioned already, the interface cannot be modified and features are very limited compared to a full version. It does however work well, the Tele-Prompt interface is very well laid out, unlike the other "limited version" teleprompter that I have worked with recently which has been very awkward to use. There is a table of contents menu at the top of the screen and it contains four tabs; Scripts, Upload, Info and Options (as shown in the photo). Table of Contents The Scripts tab contains a list of script files where you can add audio or video files that will be played when the name of the file is highlighted. You can also add images. In addition to the script files listed in the TOC, Teleprompt LE will automatically create a number of "Save as" fields, one for each of the main output files (a PDF and a couple of different MP3 files) that you can produce. This is a great feature, once you have saved a script, you can make a print, a copy and then save the script (as an audio file) as a wav file. Then the next time you want to use the same "save" feature, you can save this as an MP3. There are also a number of Script folders that contain all of the scripts within a folder. Once you have started a script on the Scripts tab, you are free to move to the next tab and change any settings that you need to make until you are happy with the setup of the script. One of the neat features that Teleprompt LE includes is the ability to save the audio recording that the built in audio recorder produces. This is quite unique in that you have a choice of audio track that can be played back, it also has the option to separate the audio and video separately and you can even use the camera records as an output to play back. This is very helpful if you are creating a "presentation" and some of the segments in the presentation are audio 6a5afdab4c

Off-Screen Tele-Prompting This feature is very useful if you want to preview your script without having to have a connected monitor or be limited to using a display that is only 1024 x 768 pixels. Just connect a laptop or netbook to the computer using the supplied cable. Then simply use the software without having to connect the monitor or see the screen. The actual Tele-Prompting can be done off-screen on the laptop display using the internal camera connection. This can be a great help if you are in a hurry and need to quickly prepare your presentation. However if you are working with other project files at the same time you will need to close them down and disconnect from the net and your machine before you can use this feature. You can synchronise the time and date displayed on the laptop with that of the teleprompter. Once connected the Tele-Prompt LE software will operate automatically and present you with the last 10 seconds of the script currently being displayed. There is also an option to stay connected to the teleprompter and have the "Off-Screen Tele-Prompt" automatically take your eyes off the laptop screen for a few moments and return them on the teleprompter when you want it to so that you are ready to make your next comment or question.
