The result is a brand-new tackling system that is more responsive and dynamic and has adjustable targetting speeds. Players can also use “Tap Shots,” which will enable players to turn on a dime, change direction instantly, or use their “read” speed (the amount of time it takes for a player to scan and react to the ball and make a run at it) to create counterattacks. We’ve also introduced a new “Dynamic” Offside system that creates more realistic gaps between defenders and attackers. On pitch, we’ve reimagined how you control a player with the addition of two brand-new gameplay features. First, you can now dribble with the left analog stick by swiping in any direction or by hitting the action button on a sprint. You can even hold the sprint button to take on your target more quickly. The new dribble feature also plays dynamically, with increased speeds and more creative moves, including sliding, backwards dribbling, fakes and in-place stops. Second, starting with FIFA 22 we’ve changed how you control the pitch. As you hold your RB button, players will now move toward their offensive centre. This new movement system will feel more fluent and natural as you use it and leads to a quicker and more dynamic on-pitch experience. We've also addressed the problem of a single defensive player crowding out the entire field of play by adding the ability for players to jostle and push one another in the defensive zone to create space. One of the biggest complaints about attacking from the second line was that the ball was too easy to grab. Now, instead of a simple tap-and-release method for shooting, players can use the free kick button to strike the ball firmly with the upper body. In FIFA 22, we've introduced tactics and stances that allow you to decide whether you'd like to play on the ground or on the ball. Finally, we've reworked the camera and goalkeepers to make them easier to control. We're incredibly excited about these new features and improvements and hope you enjoy all the "HyperMotion Technology" that they bring to the world of FIFA.
