. WTF8) { clipMan(clipBox(object1,object2), object1,object2) } bookmanager. Download and save Three.js update parent animation frame I have a Three.js object which I have positioned the top left using the "rotate" function. Then I added a child object that I want to be animated, however when I set the position of the child it moves the parent. Is there a way to set the child to the same position as the parent except not animated? A: The position should not influence the parent. When you say "added a child object that I want to be animated", are you talking about a child THREE.Mesh? If so, you should set the "parent" property of the child THREE.Mesh. If you don't set the parent property, then the children will inherit the parents position, otherwise the child won't inherit the position of its parent. TIP#34: BookManager 2 Online Help. I attached my project. I used this script and i didn't let the box fall inside the image plane. Once i'm on one edge of the box, i let it fall off the image plane and the two boxes are not colliding. But if you look at the image, the box1 (red) is colliding with the image plane. Does any of you have idea how to fix it? I really need the blue box to be colliding with the image plane. See also the attached file "bookmanager.js" If you download this script you can drag&drop it into your plugins folder and then simply upload it as the first plugin. A: OK, so I wrote a script which does exactly this, and this script is called BookManager (If you download this script and then drag it into your plugins directory, it should work out of the box with no setup required. You won't need to modify any settings at all, unless you'd rather select the image planes manually when dragging the models over. I should also add that this script works in both 3DS Max 2016 and 2017 (there are 2 branches of the script in the repository, but it only works in 2016 and 2017) Q: Trying to understand the different tenses for "hasten" 1) I read that the 3rd person form of "to hasten" is "to hasten {someone} / thing". So, I thought I had understood that I should use the present tense of the verb if I had to use it in reference to a present action, and the past tense if I was referring to an action that had happened in the past. My question is that, is my interpretation correct? Or did I misunderstand something? 2) Should I use the present tense when referring to a reaction? Is it true that "a person should not react to something until he/she has been told"? A: To hasten means to cause someone or something to move or to react more quickly than usual. I want to hasten the bus, so I can leave. We are in the process of hastening the arrival of the new paper. The body will be moved away from the place where we are storing it as
